SUBJECT: US-PRC Exchanges

The President has directed that a study be made of ways in which US-PRC exchanges in such fields as science, technology, culture, sports, and journalism, agreed on in the Joint United States-PRC Communiqué, can be facilitated.

The study should identify US interests and objectives to be pursued through these programs. The study also should address PRC attitudes and practices in such exchange programs, including the role of governmental and nongovernmental institutions and PRC political objectives in promoting or permitting such exchanges.

The study should include consideration of the following issues:

-- The roles which should be played by US governmental and nongovernmental institutions and the relationship of the US Government to nongovernmental institutions included in such programs. An assessment and the pros and cons of particular private nongovernmental groups which might be considered as chosen instruments to further exchanges should be included.

-- Ways in which direct contact in a third-nation capital should be used to facilitate the implementation of the Communiqué understanding.

-- Specific types of exchanges to which the US should give priority and the means to promote these particular areas.
